Made-In-Connecticut War Interviews

"What Have the Allies a Right to Expect from the United States?"

An Interview With Arthur L. Shipman of Hartford, Chairman of the Hartford County Auxiliary Committee of the Connecticut State Council of Defense.

Arthur L. Shipman, chairman of the Hartford County Auxiliary Committee of the Connecticut State Council of Defense, in one of the series of "Made in Connecticut War Interviews" secured by the Connecticut State Council of Defense and made public through the newspapers, answers the question, "What have the Allies a right to expect from the United States?" with the following statement:

"To put the question in another form, and one which is frequently asked nowadays, 'What are we in this war for, anyhow?'

"Two undeniable facts furnish the answer: 'First, the ocean and its seas, the highways of travel and commerce, free to all neutrals, were forbidden us by the German empire.'

"Second, that prohibition was enforced against our repeated protests by one of the meanest as well as one of the most cruel of all war devices, the submarine. We had therefore to fight for our rights."

"It is of little consequence that this is only one of the reasons, and perhaps not the most important reason, why we are now at war. No one can deny, however, that Germany's prohibition of the use of the seas is the most immediate and direct cause of our being in the struggle."

"Suppose, then, that such were the only reasons. Our duty, it might be said, was thereby limited to clearing for safe travel the ocean's highways by the use of our naval forces, and there is where we should stop."

"But have our allies only the right to expect of us police protection for our own carrying trade? Let us see what that involves. Our goods are carried in many other vessels besides those that fly our country's flag. We cannot protect our goods en route without protecting the vessel that contains them, whether British, Dutch, Norwegian or French. The moment one of our ships is fired upon by a British merchantman carrying our goods, we are in effect fighting on British soil to defend it from invasion."

"But no one can put any limit on his lawful efforts in a fight. If one goes in at all, one must go in all over. This is true, not only from the point of view of the spectator, but from the points of view of our opponents, our allies and ourselves."

"Suppose that we could quiet our own sense of shame by standing on the outskirts and protecting only the avenues of commerce, although that would be an impossible position for America with its history and traditions to occupy. Surely the onlookers and our children would put themselves in the position of our allies and say, 'Whatever America has of resources, money, men, supplies, material, food, should be used without stint for our support.' Men, women and children are suffering untold losses in body, mind and spirit from the war and especially from the kind of warfare which is being waged by the central powers. It therefore behooves every one of us—and by 'us,' I mean every man, woman and child that make up America—to contribute all in his power to fight our fight—that is, the fight of ourselves and our allies. Mark you, that in what I have said we are putting aside all higher duty, our duty to humanity, our duty to save, or help save, the world as a proper place for us and them to live and die in. This conclusion is placed upon the lowest possible ground, viz., the duty of every one who enters our contest: the mere animal obligation toward one's fellows in a fight."

What Overseas Means.

Chancellor Michaelis is still of the opinion that he, Von Hindenburg, the Kaiser and the German armies can make the world safe for autocracy. Answer messages of the Pan German, who are still boosting the sentiment all around the German world in favor of demanding annexations and indemnities. Herr Michaelis says: "I am firmly confident that the splendid military situation will help us to a peace which will guarantee permanently the German empire's condition of existence on the continent and overseas." "Overseas" means, incidentally, the United States. What is the difference between an assumption like this and the position occupied by the late unlamented Zimmermann, who wanted to give Texas to Mexico? None. It is an assertion of the extreme of Junkerism. Annexations and indemnities have by this time been pretty well given up by the German people. But not, it seems, by Michaelis or his master. They need more convincing, at one end or the other of the line.—Boston Transcript.

Nothing Going to Waste.

Washington, Aug. 15.—Not a quart of perishable fruits or vegetables is going to waste in the little town of Gardner, Mass., according to a report which is made to the U. S. department of agriculture by the editor of a small daily paper now co-operating with the government in its emergency campaign.

According to the last census the population of Gardner is 15,000. Seventeen hundred home gardens were planted in Gardner this spring, one to every nine inhabitants. "The owners have not planted and worked them for fun," writes the editor of the daily paper. "They will look after the crop."

Gardner has a municipal canning factory to take care of its surplus products, and the Ladies Aid society is running evening schools four times a week. In addition, Gardner is establishing a municipal market, and state agricultural agencies, as well as the federal department of agriculture, are supplying the papers of Gardner with information on canning and preserving.

Should Be Thankful.

We kick and complain about the heat, but are we thankful as we should be for every gentle breeze that blows our way?—Toledo Blade.

Crop prospects in Austria are reported by the Neues Pester Journal to be unfavorable.

BUSY DAYS ON AMERICAN WARSHIPS

This photograph, taken very recently and given out for publication by the committee on public information in Washington and copyrighted by the committee, shows a group of sailormen on one of the navy's largest vessels swabbing out a gun of a secondary battery after firing in target practice. The public is assured by the department that the navy is being kept up to the top notch of efficiency and preparedness, ready to give a good account of itself whenever it may meet the Teutons.
